LINGUISTIC SOCIETY AT THE UNIVERSITY OF WASHINGTON (LSUW)

Linguistics majors are automatic members of the Linguistic Society at the University of Washington (LSUW), an organization consisting of undergraduate and graduate majors in linguistics. LSUW activities include: organization of colloquia by local and visiting faculty and students, publication of a departmental newsletter, occasional publication of the UW Working Papers in Linguistics, organization of social events, etc. LSUW meetings are quarterly or more frequent. Colloquia are usually held on Friday afternoons during Autumn, Winter and Spring quarters. Linguistics majors may sign up to tutor students in introductory linguistics classes. See the undergraduate adviser if you are interested.
